LITTLE THEATRE 1959 SEASON TO OPEN DECEMBER 11

The 1959 season of the Bay St. Louis Little Theatre promises to get a good send-off with the delightful comedy, "The Reclining Figure" which played on Broadway some 4 years ago. The presentation is star-studded with local talent.

Mayor Johnny Scafide takes the leading role of Lucas Edgerton, the Pasadena millionaire who collects world famous paintings and stores them away in his vault.

Charles Carter, Jr., plays the part of Sam Ellis, a young man with an ideal, and an ambition to open his own art gallery to display the works of unknown artists. However he unwittingly becomes involved in a forgery of a Renoir "The Reclining Figure" which his former employee Jonas Astorge has planted.

Jonas Astorge, the Hungarian-New York art dealer who is completely without integrity is played by Basil Cockshott, his first role in our Little Theatre.

Curtis Matherne plays the disillusioned artist who forged the painting which causes all of the trouble.

The only female character in the play is Lucas Edgerton's daughter, Cass, who has designs on Sam Ellis, the only man she has run into who will stand up against her father. This part is ably played by Adele Husband. As the plot becomes involved, clever dialogue flows.

Other characters who contribute to the fun and confusion are:

Argamonte, the art expert—Phil Allison..

Dr. Hickey, Head of the Wildheim Foundation—Turk Carter.

Prof. Jumelle, the Frenchman who was a personal friend of Renoir (Paul White).

Denesco, the Hungarian cohort of Astorge, Ben Wood.

William, the butler, Lloyd Griffith.

ELGIN MITCHELL IS HELD ON ATTEMPTED MURDER CHARGE

A Bay St. Louis carpenter is being held in Hancock County jail on an attempted murder charge, after firing 32 pistol shots and two shotgun blasts into the residence of his estranged wife in Santa Rosa Community early last Friday.

Deputy Sheriff Carl Garcia said bond for Elgin Mitchell had been set at $25,000.

The deputy added that Mitchell also faces a charge of assault with a deadly weapon in Picayune where he engaged in a gun battle with A. W. Alsobrook, 28-year-old stepson of Santa Rosa, about 9 a. m. after driving away from Santa Rosa.

Garcia said Mitchell and Alsobrook exchanged approximately 18 shots with .22 calibre pistols. Both ran out of ammunition without scoring a hit. Mitchell, who was beaten over the head by Alsobrook, Garcia stated was treated for a severe head laceration.

Alsobrook and Mitchell were booked by the Picayune City police and later released under $100 bond each.

Mitchell was returned to Bay St. Louis in custody of Deputies Carl Garcia and Leonard Ladner.

Garcia said that Mrs. Mitchell and her 82-year-old mother were in their home at Santa Rosa when Mitchell fired the shots.

They were not injured but it was said that a front picture window was punctured by 12 bullets and the front of the house sprayed by shots.

According to Garcia the Mitchells separated about three months ago and Mrs. Mitchell filed a divorce action returnable to the February term of Chancery Court.

Mitchell was released Saturday on $25.000 bond.

Bay High's FHA'ers scored a big success before an audience of about 50 girls Saturday, November 15, at the Sub-district meeting at West Junior High School, Gulfport.

Lizbeth Fenz, Austrian exchange student and senior at Bay High, and Ulrike Winckelmann, German student and freshman at Bay High enlightened the audience on the differences between American ways of living, recreation habits, food, social life, and dating habits and the customs in their countries. The program was presented in the form of a panel interview composed of Edith Traub, V. Breland, Aline Hobbs, Vidalia Schultz and Gloria Kimmel, all sophomores at Bay High.

The theme of the program "How to Promote International Good Will", one of the eight purposes of the club, was emphasized by the Bay St. Louis Chapter in the form of this panel. They expressed the thought "How to understand Our Foreign Neighbors."

Edith Traub, narrator and vice-president of the local group, summarized the panel in closing and stated several very interesting points:

1. Outstanding students could apply to be an exchange student by writing to the ICYE, the International Christian Youth Exchange.
2. American youths do not fully appreciate all the conveniences they have, which they often consider as necessities, whereas in many foreign countries they are absolutely luxuries.
3. Youth organizations and clubs are numerous in America. School activities are not very popular in foreign countries. More emphasis is laid on scholastic subjects.
4. European girls and boys start later with dating, but they also go steady.
5. Europeans appreciate food a lot more, as they still remember the short years during and after the war.

The last point about the penpals was emphasized by Lizbeth Fenz. She told about her own, her brother's and sister's experiences with penpals. Writing to students in other countries helps overcome language barriers.

After the panel the audience was allowed to ask additional questions. Lizbeth was able to tell them a lot about her country.

Mrs. C. C. McDonald, Sr. gave a talk on FHA'ers and their contribution to promote international good will in connection with the UNESCO plan.

Much will depend upon the attitude of a responsible people to assume the leadership promised free men under a constitutional form of government and encouraged by our traditional freedoms. We believe we will share these things:

1. A climate created by favorable public attitudes and state (and local) laws, in which industry will seek opportunity and permanence.

2. An atmosphere where a free economy will permit the pursuit of competitive practices and sustain the profit motive common to capitalistic America.

3. A congenial atmosphere conducive to labor-management understanding, more harmonious relations leading to higher standards of living, greater efficiency, increased productivity and profits. all resulting in a boost to the economy of the state.

4. An economyy based on the total resources potential of the state, favoring none by exemption. fathering none by subsidy, and strangling none with inequitable treatment.

Are these observations the products of imagination,? The answer will be found in the planning files of State and Local Governments, and large and small businesses throughout the state. Rarely, if ever, do these agencies gamble on the future. Instead, the future is created in shop, office and public halls by extensive designing and testing, followed by activiating the planning in relation to the community's needs and its consuming ability.

4. These architects of tomorrow are our Governors, Statesmen, City Fathers. Financial Institutions, Manufacturers, Wholesale and Retail Merchants, Farmers, Producers and Processors of raw materials from natural resources. Transporters, Distributors, Service Agencies, and Consumers. The stimuli comes from the realization of all that considered and guided action must precede that which cannot be avoided. . . .change.

The oil industry in Mississippi shares the view of these forward thinkers and must constantly adjust its program to meet the demands of a changing population, and a changing economy. It will produce crude oil and natural gas, manufacture and distribute products, prosper or fail as a major industry, and contribute to the general welfare of the state's economy only in relation to its ability to function in economic freedom.

Here are a few figures taken from oil's fact book. In 1957 Mississippi had more than 650 thousand registered motor vehicles which, without-of-town purchasers, con- ... producing state. About 10 million acres of land were under lease as of January 1, 1958, which means that the farmer comes in for his share of oil revenue regardless of his land's productivity in crops or oil. More than 10 thousand of the state's people are employeyd by or in oil businesses, and pay taxes and spend their incomes in Mississippi. Produce taxes last year produced more than $43 million in revenue for the state, while oil and gas severance taxes brought in close to $9 million more for a total of more than $52 million as oil's contributon from only two tax sources. leaving income, ad valorem (assessment on pipelines alone for ad valorem tax purposes is $124,159,513 or about 10% of the state total real and personal property assessment of $1,349,595,678), privilege, sales, and many other direct and indirect levies which would increase the total tax tremendously, all of which must be paid by the consumers of petroleum products, ... our tax burden has been proved time and again. Our profits amount to only a fair return on investments and assets and are published as a matter of public information. Last, but perhaps not least, we have no privileges, individual or corporate, not accorded to any and all businesses and industries.

Our industry, Nicholas said, is prepared to meet the crude oil and product needs of an expanding population and powering additional industrial activity resulting from such an increase.

By the time our six year olds reach their typing class and start pecking out the ancient practice sentence "Now is the time for all good men to some to the aid of their Country" we believe that Mississippi business men will have assumed the obligations imposed by privileges accorded them under our constitution form of government. We will assume our responsibilities at the conference table, and in public places, in defense of our freedoms, and as guardian of a "trust fund" running into billions of dollars established by our industry for America's youngsters who within a short time will take over the business of finding, producing, transporting, and marketing the petroleum products necessary for tomorrow's world of fantatstic realism.

[redacted]

... But our warped thinking in this matter illustrates the degree to which many Christians have been infected with Puritanism. A girl may park evening after evening with her boy friend in Lovers Lane and still be regarded as a "respectable" young woman. Another girl may have one single moment of moral weakness and, if a baby comes, she is the target of all the self-righteous tongues in the neighborhood. Actually the second girl may be the more virtuous of the two, but she has broken the great American Commandment, "Thou shalt not get caught."

WHEN such an unhappy event does occur, parents must recognize that their impulse to lash out with ... is basically a defense mechanism against their fear of ... sympathy and understanding it is ... This girl is ridden by guilt ... tortured with a great sense of shame. Most of all she is frightened, frightened at the prospect of childbirth and parenthood, of which she understands so little. ...

No doubt the sin which brought on the pregnancy long since has been confessed, long since has been forgiven by God. This girl is not an abandoned sinner.

THIS IS the time for a good mother to give her daughter the reassurance she needs: "We're sorry dear you forgot your duty to God and committed sin; but the sin is all in the past, so let's forget about that. Right now the important thing is to plan for the baby's coming. The world hasn't come to an end for you, and you mustn't think that having a baby is going to be a sin. You're still a good girl, and you're still our girl. Tonight we'll go over and have a talk with the pastor."

Help with the other problems that arise — To marry the boy or not? Where to go to have the baby? To keep the baby or not?— will be given by the pastor and the social worker whom the pastor recommends. But right now as the girl makes her first avowal, haltingly or with pretended bravado— right now is the time for parental love to rise to its grandest heights.

"The owner of small woodlands is vital to the future of the pulp and paper industry," Mr. Whittle told the representatives of the pulp and paper industry who will serve as chairman for the program in their state.

He said that the program, to be known as the Pilot Forest project—will not only help small landowners bring broader public understanding of the pulp and paper industry, its problems, and its contributions to the South.

Following the meeting, Mr. Whittle said the SPCA expects to dedicate approximately 100 Pilot Forests when the industry celebrates the second annual Pulp and Paper Day next April 14. State chairmen will work with conservation and agricultural leaders in counties where Pilot Forest are to be set up, he explained.

Mr. Whittle said that pulp and paper companies have agreed to do a complete forestry job on wood lots to be selected. This will include scientific harvesting, controlling undesirable species, establishing fire control measures, planting seedlings, and other required practices. All work will be performed without charge to the owner of the property picked for the demonstration forest.

Woodlands selected for the program will be typical of the area in which they are located and will serve as permanent guides to good forestry practices for landowners in the area.

Henry J. Malsberger, of Atlanter, general manager of the Southern Pulpwood Conservation Association, presided at the meeting.

"FISHING IN THE SKY"

"Fishing in the Sky" is done at Minudie about 29 miles from Amherst, Noca Scotia. Minudie shad are trapped in weirs and, when the Bay of Fundy tide drops 40 feet, the fishermen drive horse and wagon across the flats and shake the fish out of the nets. The process has to be done quickly to avoid being trapped by the incoming tide.—Contributed.

The second part of the dove season will open soon and some good shooting should be in store for those liking that kind of sport. Cooler weather should make things much better.

Shooting matches are being planned just now. It is a good way to get some good meat and turkeys—if you know how to shoot. Better attend them and help some good cause at the same time.

Watson Johns is still catching his share of big green trout. Don't know exactly where he is getting them?

SOIL Conservation

Sanford and Dunnam

Farmers in the county (Hancock) have planted most of their winter crops and pastures; some have very pretty oats which are ready to graze. Oats, if not grazed when they reach a height of six to ten inches will start jointing as if for seeding, thereby causing loss in quanity and quality of grazing. Oats, if being used for grazing this winter should have another application of nitrogen if they are not growing well.

Caley peas (wild winter peas) make a good growth for winter cover and are also highly desirable for grazing, especially, if planted with an old grass sod, and fertilized well.

Winter peas are also a soil conditioner which adds organic matter and plant food to soil. These conditions are very desirable to help maintin the productive of our soil.

There are many other plants which yu may need to use on your farm for a soil conditioner and as a soil builder.

Other information may be obtained by contacting your Agricultural Offices.
